INTRODUCTION

In preparation for the residency of noted author James Michener on the Sheldon Jackson College campus during 1984 and 1985, President Michael Kaelke asked the library staff to prepare a bibliography of the resources available in the C.L. Andrews Collection. These publications are all properly cataloged in the card catalog files of Stratton Library. This compilation was prepared for Mr. Michener to facilitate his research.

We are most fortunate to have possession of this noteworthy collection. Mr. Clarence L. Andrews, teacher, historian, journalist, and photographer first visited Alaska when he was thirty years of age and remained for more than ten years beginning in 1898. He worked in the customs office as an agent of the U.S. Treasury in Sitka, Skagway and Eagle.

The collection consists of approximately 1900 cataloged volumes. In addition, it includes a number of periodicals, folders of documentation, and newspapers published in and around Alaska. There are voluminous notes relating to the history of Alaska from the early days of exploration and fur trading down to the late 1900s.

Originally this rare book collection was the private collection of Mr. Andrews, who himself was the author of several books about Alaska. The Andrews collection came to Sitka in the 1940s and was moved to the Sheldon Jackson library in 1966. At that time an agreement was made between the Sitka Library Association and Sheldon Jackson College that the college would house and catalog the collection. In 1973, the collection was donated to Sheldon Jackson College by the Public Library Association with the condition that it remain intact and in Sitka.

Mr. Andrews first visited Alaska in 1892. He returned to the Pacific Northwest and his job as a clerk in the King County Auditor's office.

In 1897, Mr. Andrews signed on as a packer with the Duke of Abruzzi's expedition to climb Mt. St. Elias. After the successful climb, he obtained a job in the U.S. Customs Service office in Sitka, Alaska.

The gold rush of 1898 brought thousands of men and tons of supplies through Skagway, Alaska. Mr. Andrews was sent to Skagway to take over the customs office. His predecessor was in trouble because of illegal whiskey importation. Mr. Andrews remained in Skagway until 1904. While he was in Skagway, his wife and three daughters went to the Pacific Northwest for a visit. They were drowned in a flood in Heppner, Oregon on June 14, 1903.

In 1904, Mr. Andrews was sent to Eagle, Alaska to take over the customs office. Eagle is located on the Yukon River, six miles inside the United States-Canadian border. All traffic on the Yukon, to and from Dawson and the Klondike region, had to clear customs at Eagle. The Nome gold rush of 1900 and the gold discovery in Fairbanks in 1902 caused an increase in travel from the Klondike region to the new areas. The customs office was open twenty-four hours a day during the peak of the traffic. Mr Andrews went to Fairbanks to inspect river steamers in 1904. During the winter of 1904-05, Mr. Andrews traveled to New York as the first Alaskan delegate to the Board of Appraisers' meeting. Enroute, he visited the St. Louis World's Fair; and on his return, stopped in Washington D.C. for orders from the U.S. Customs Service.

During his five years in Eagle, Mr. Andrews spent part of each winter outside Alaska. His notes relate his experiences and events that happened in Alaska, as well as some things from his travels. Captain Roland Amundsen and Captain Moog stopped in Eagle on December 12, 1905 after a thirty-six day trek, by dog team, across the Arctic from their ice-locked vessels at Herschel Island. They rested, refitted, and resupplied for several weeks and departed for Herschel Island on January 29, 1906. Mr. Andrews traveled the Yukon River system from Skagway to St. Michael several times during his stay in Eagle. The gold-seeking traffic dwindled as the gold ran out and the customs business became slow. Mr. Andrews retired from the U.S. Customs Service in 1909 and went to Seattle.

The U.S. Department of the Interior hired Mr. Andrews as a special agent in January 1909. He was dispatched to Alaska to gather agricultural and horticultural materials for the Alaska exhibit at the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition that was to be held in Seattle, June 1 - October 16, 1909. Mr. Andrews traveled by steamer to Cordova and Valdez, Alaska. He went by sled over the Valdez-Fairbanks trail to Fairbanks. He traveled to Hot Springs on the Tanana River and around the Fairbanks area before returning to Seattle, via the Valdez-Fairbanks trail, in April 1909.

The Pacific Northwest was Mr. Andrews' home for the next fourteen years. He worked in the Seattle area, but devoted his main efforts to traveling to and from Alaska to gather material for future use. He wrote articles and books on Alaskan subjects and added many photographs to his large collection of pictures of Alaska and the Arctic.

The northland called him, again, in 1923 when he went to work for the U.S. Bureau of Education and Reindeer Service at Kivalina, Alaska. He worked, taught, and lived with the Eskimos in Kivalina, Deering, Wainwright, Barrow, and other areas in Northwest Alaska. In 1926, he was appointed Reindeer Superintendent in Nome, Alaska. He retired from the Reindeer Service in 1929.

From 1929 until his death in 1948, Mr. Andrews lived in Seattle, Washington and Eugene, Oregon. He wrote articles, books, and gave lectures on Alaska. He was a vociferous advocate of Eskimo rights. In 1936 he took over publishing

The Eskimo as a vehicle to spread his fight for the Eskimo. He traveled to Barrow, Alaska on the U.S. Coast Guard Cutter "Spencer" in 1939 to gather more information on the Eskimo reindeer herds. He continued publication of The Eskimo until 1947.

Mr. Andrews died in Eugene, Oregon on April 17, 1948 at the age of eighty-six.
